Patrick Salvadori is a Drama Teacher at Wallingford School in Oxfordshire. The Expressive Arts department regularly use Boardworks Drama on their interactive whiteboards for whole-class teaching throughout their KS3 lessons.

Patrick comments, “I think the material is very good in the sense that there’s an awful lot of variety. So you’ve got the social issues, you’ve got Blood Brothers, and it’s varied enough for different age groups to do, especially at KS3.”

Drama teachers at Wallingford School use Boardworks interactive resources as a practical way of bringing Drama to life in the classroom. “I think the strength in particular is the characters,” says Patrick. “Because of the visual impact of it, it helps the students understand a variety of concepts more clearly.”

The Expressive Arts department find the thematic structure of Boardworks Drama useful, and the tone appropriate for the syllabus they teach. “I think it’s important for students to learn the jargon and be challenged by it”, says Patrick “Boardworks uses the jargon very well.”
